Rheem Elementary Gets Garden Help

With the help of Donald L. Rheem Elementary School teacher Sarah Stocco, 12 high school students from the Student Conservation Association's Bay Area Conservation Leadership Corps (SCA) and their guests helped build a trail up the hill through the new school garden, construct planter boxes, and clear trash and other debris from a nearby stream on March 22. This service project was made possible by the planning of these twelve second or third year SCA members, SCA crew leaders, and Stocco, who is an SCA alumna. The San Francisco Bay Area CLC program is a high school level conservation training ground that is part of SCA, a national youth conservation organization.
