

Rheem Closes Three Upstairs Theaters to be ADA Compliant

Partial closing reveals long-term challenge

Cliff Dochterman just wanted to do his job as the recent Moraga appointee to the Contra Costa County Advisory Council on Aging when he reported in a letter to the Town Council that the Rheem Theatre was in violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). The second floor is not accessible to anyone unable to climb stairs, since the theater's lift is broken beyond repair.

His letter had immediate repercussions: Derek Zemrak, of the California Independent Film Festival Association which operates the theater, decided to close the three small upstairs theaters on Jan. 18.

Zemrak is working with the community to find a solution, but it looks likely that the Rheem will function with just one theater for at least two months. This means much less revenue and that all other programs, such as the classic film series and Green Rheem film nights, will be canceled until the upper floor can be re-opened.

"I am not arguing with what was said (by Dochterman)," said Zemrak, "but we had to protect ourselves." Zemrak indicated that a lawsuit had been filed earlier against the theater due to an ADA violation, even before the lift broke. "These regulations are hard to follow in old buildings," he said. "We changed counter height, provided access in the theaters, and we have been working with the state and the property owner to find solutions." The letter about the lift was the last straw.

This elevator had been a problem for a while and had already undergone repairs. "We spent $10,000 to fix it last year, but when it failed again five weeks ago, the repair team said it was broken beyond repair," said Zemrak. Installing a new elevator will cost about $30,000. "For this type of commercial building you need a custom-made elevator," he explained.

Mahesh Puri, owner of the building, said he was not ready to make that investment. "The rent from the theater does not even cover all my costs, such as the property tax," said Puri. "I cannot make this kind of investment." Compounding the problem for Zemrak is the term of the lease: there is only 14 months left, with no certainty with what the property owner will want to do next. "What we need is a long-term lease, at least seven or 10 years," he said.

The broken lift was just the one issue that brought the long-term survival of the Theatre to the public attention, when in fact town staff had already started working with Zemrak and Puri to find a solution.

"The independent theaters that continue to function, such as theaters in Larkspur and Modesto, are owned by the towns and are operated by a professional," said Zemrak. Moraga Town Manager Jill Keimach is familiar with the specificities of operating an independent movie theater; she was working with the city of El Cerrito when it purchased its theater in 2002 through a redevelopment agency.
