EFO Big Band members enjoying a short break at weeknight practice. If you are out of town for July 4, you can catch the band playing in the Orinda Community Park on July 16. Photo provided

Waterman admits "it's a challenge" and "a balancing act" to plan Fourth of July events in Orinda because the city doesn't want to detract from events in nearby Moraga, which this year includes a pancake breakfast, followed by the ever-popular dog parade and bike parade, community booths, as well as games and jumpies at the Moraga Commons. He credits his co-chair Chris Laszcz-Davis for making things happen.

Laszcz-Davis called herself a "catalyst for the shift," saying she is "amazed by how much the community gives back," and sees "a lot of energy and momentum toward a common focus."

Waterman said the parade literally involves "a lot of moving parts," including the presence of swim teams, sports clubs, family floats and "more elaborate" local business floats—look for Lamorinda Weekly! Last year's parade featured veterans as the Grand Marshals; this year the focus will be on youth. Five swimmers, each representing an area swim club, as well as the Miramonte High School public speaking team will be honored as the 2013 Grand Marshals. For those who love live marching music, the Volunteer Marching Band is back. Leader Joe Barton expects a turnout of 40 to 60 musicians. Participants include Barton's boss, Lamorinda Music co-owner Colleen McCormick, on clarinet.

For McCormick, it's a family affair — her son Scotty plays sousaphone, her daughter clarinet and her husband also saxophone. "We've been marching in the parade since 1995, since I was eight months pregnant with my son," she said. The group practices for about an hour before turning onto the route.

"We show up. We just kind of work on marching," Barton added.

He said the parade draws musicians young and old, ages 8 to 80, from this "huge music community." Parade watchers can expect to see a mix of grade school musicians (Burton Valley Elementary students have been past participants) some Rossmoor Big Band members, as well as musicians from local junior highs and high schools.

"Everybody's sight reading," Barton said, adding the band has some "really great musicians" and some who merely aspire to greatness. Barton said this year's band already includes "big fun instruments" like the sousaphone and tuba, plus a ukulele player and flutist.

Other activities include a pancake breakfast, a flag-raising ceremony and activities at Community Center Park. Graduating Miramonte High School senior Phil Hoxie has organized 24 musicians to play at the Orinda Community Center as part of the Fourth of July celebration. High school students from Miramonte, Acalanes, and Northgate, as well as returning college students and other local musicians, will entertain the 4th of July crowds for the third year in a row.

The group, all accomplished musicians, many of whom have played together in the Miramonte Jazz Band, have been rehearsing three days per week for the past several weeks. They are happy to devote the time to raise awareness for the Educational Foundation of Orinda, which sponsors music in the Orinda schools. The Miramonte band teacher Ari Gorman has made necessary equipment available on loan, keeping costs for the performance at zero.

The festivities will culminate at and around the Moraga Country Club for the annual fireworks display thanks to hard work within the three communities to garner the additional funding needed to offset costs. As of June 28, according to Moraga Parks and Recreation director Jay Ingram, the local fundraising drive has raised $18,500 towards its $24,000 goal. The Orinda Association will be raising money at the parade as well this year, splitting the funds to support the parade and Moraga fireworks (see related article on page B1).

Looking ahead, Waterman said the Orinda Association expects to keep their Fourth of July celebration going well into the future, thanks to a dedicated group of 15 to 20 volunteers all working together.

"We're not three communities," explained Laszcz-Davis, "we're one community."
