

Published September 10th, 2014

For the Love of a School

By Sophie Braccini

From left: Susie Allison and Cathy Harris climb on a play structure at Mulberry Tree Preschool to take a look at the new roof. Photo Sophie Braccini

and is one of the oldest Lamorinda preschools. The round building was constructed with the children in mind and belongs to the preschool, but the land is leased from the Town of Moraga. When director Susie Allison noticed last March that the roof was leaking, she knew it was the school's financial responsibility to repair it. "We had a tar and pebble roof that probably dated to the construction of the building," says Allison. "My husband sealed the roof so we could sustain classes during the winter; but we knew that major repair was in order."

Within a few weeks of spreading the word, almost half of the $33,000 needed to repair the roof was raised. "Parents donated, but also grandparents, and 20 percent of our donors were alumni parents who do not have kids in the school anymore," says Harris. "That's because there is so much love for this school."

Since some of the beams had dry rot, and the school was closed in August, all the beams were cut back and angled, the dry rot was removed and/or repaired, and the old roof was removed and replaced by a new polyvinyl chloride (PVC) roof. "It was all done within a week," Allison says.

Both of Harris' sons attended the preschool last year. She says the school turned her shy and reserved first born into an independent and confident kindergartner at Los Perales Elementary School this fall, and her turbulent second son finds a great outlet at Mulberry Tree, which offers boundaries for his energy. Concepts like conscious discipline are started early at 2 years old, giving students the vocabulary and the responsibility to exercise self-discipline. Harris also believes that the friendships parents form add to the attachment to the preschool.

"This preschool is such a warm nurturing place for our children," says Harris. "It is a safe traditional nursery school program that balances real academics, creativity and playtime."

For more information about Mulberry Tree, go to www.mulberrytreepreschool.com.

It feels cool inside the Mulberry Tree Preschool these days, even when the sun beats down on the charming round building that sits next to the Moraga Commons on St. Mary's Road. The cool effect is a by-product of the badly needed roof restoration that happened last month. The new white flat roof was a big expense, but the community of parents and alumni got together to help underwrite the expense, showing their support for this little Moraga institution.

"We only had a short period of time to raise the money, we ran different scenarios and decided to simply spread the word to current parents and alumni," Parents Enrichment Committee co-chair Cathy Harris explains. "We just laid down the facts and asked for help."

The effort Harris spearheaded was a community project, and she says this was her first nonprofit fundraising effort for a school. The preschool had also never done fundraising before.

Mulberry Tree Preschool was founded in 1972

Reach the reporter at: sophie@lamorindaweekly.com

back

Copyright © Lamorinda Weekly, Moraga CA