City appoints interim city manager

As the search continues for a new city manager following the resignation of City Manager Steven Falk effective at the end of this year, the city has appointed longtime staff member Niroop Srivatsa as interim manager. The council anticipates its search for a permanent city manager will be completed by spring.

The city council voted for the appointment at the Dec. 10 meeting. Srivatsa has over 30 years of local government experience with 24 of them in Lafayette. She has served as the city's director of planning and building services for the past 17 years during which time she has led city staff and advised the council and planning commission on land use policy, strategic growth initiatives and housing and economic development matters.

Srivatsa has acted as incident commander during emergency operations drills and has held leadership roles during real emergencies such as the 2000 flooding in Lafayette. She has also served as acting city manager from time to time and is one of the most visible staff members, having met with many residents over the years on land-use projects.

Srivatsa serves on the League of California Cities' Revenue and Taxation Committee, which provides policy direction on pending legislation to the League board and advocates for local control. She was recently appointed as an alternate commissioner to the California Statewide Communities Development Authority, where she will review and approve applications from more than 500 cities, counties and special districts for funding community infrastructure, affordable housing, and environmental projects.

Falk, who has held the position since 1996, said in a statement from the city released Dec. 12, "Ms. Srivatsa's personal work ethic can be summarized in three words – 'whatever it takes' – and her love for and dedication to Lafayette and its mission to preserve and enhance the city's semirural character is pure."

"She has a rich and unmatched understanding of the city's major physical, engineering, and development challenges," added Falk. "Ms. Srivatsa will serve ably as the city's interim city manager."

Srivatsa has a bachelor's degree in architecture and town planning from Madras University in Chennai, India. She and her husband, Sanjay, have two sons who attended Lafayette schools.

"I am honored and excited to be appointed as the interim manager for a city that I truly love," said Srivatsa.

"Our community is profoundly fortunate to have Niroop working for them as interim city manager," said Mayor Cam Burks. "She is an outstanding, deeply qualified leader who will play an integral role in moving our city forward," adding, "I couldn't be more pleased with the council's selection."

New mayor calls for respectful, civil collaboration as city changes guard

It was all change at the packed Dec. 10 city council meeting – a meeting that recognized and celebrated the many years of service to the city by outgoing Mayor Don Tatzin and outgoing City Manager Steve Falk, along with Council Member Ivor Samson, and then installed newly elected council members Teresa

Gerring and Susan Candell. Vice Mayor Cam Burks moved to the central chair on the dais to assume the role of mayor and Council Member Mike Anderson, although absent on the evening, took over as vice mayor.

First up was Tatzin to address Falk's many achievements during his 22-year tenure as city manager. Falk will be retiring at the end of the year. Noting amongst other accomplishments Falk's ability to "hire wisely," Tatzin remarked on the low turnover within city staff and also remarked on the healthy state of the city's finances, the fixed roads, the robust restaurant row, the pedestrian-friendly downtown, new sidewalks, public art, the new library and Veterans' building and described Falk as "visionary."

Samson, in his remarks before stepping away from the dais, paid tribute to Tatzin with whom, he acknowledged, he has had some vehement disagreements and to Falk, with whom he has not always agreed either, and he spent a while addressing the recent election. "Irrespective of how you voted," he said, "there is a common sadness that our city is divided and needs to be brought together again. I agree."

Referring to "absurd and irresponsible comments" on social media and "vile and disgusting personal accusations with no basis or accountability," Samson said that he hopes never to see such hatred and bigotry in the community again and said that he hopes that going forward people can recognize that ideas sometime clash and that it is healthy for democracy.

Tatzin then made his final remarks as mayor and noted that over his 33 years on the council, including seven stints as mayor, he has served with 17 different council members. He credited his wife, Ellen Reintjes, for her continued support. Tatzin talked about a theme that he has frequently referenced – the virtuous circle of Lafayette, saying that people move here for good schools and become involved for good in the community.

Burks paid tribute to Tatzin and noted that Tatzin always stressed the importance of civility, decency, respect and collaboration and expressed his hopes to support that legacy within the council.

As Tatzin and Samson left, Candell was sworn in by City Clerk Joanne Robbins and Gerring was sworn in by state Sen. Steve Glazer. Both made remarks expressing thanks to family and gratitude for being able to serve.

The new mayor's remarks focused heavily on the theme of transparency and collaboration, overcoming the "fracturing and divisiveness" that the community has experienced over the past several months. "The foundation of my vision for 2019 rests on taking action that will unify the city, stimulate respectful and civil collaboration and strengthen the community," Burks said.

"It's imperative that we, as a city council, foster an inclusive and transparent environment; one that prioritizes civility, respect, kindness and openness to everyone's opinion," Burks said. "Debate and alternative views are foundational elements of our democratic system. We need to affirm these elements in ways that do not alienate our fellow neighbor."

Burks reaffirmed that he is eager to focus on protecting local control on land use and development from a state legislature that he says appears eager to strip these fundamental rights.

He stressed the importance of reaffirming community values and committing to a dedicated plan to augment transparency in everything the council does.

Burks spoke too of an expanded emergency preparedness focus, particularly in the area of wildfire preparation.

Additionally he said he wanted to address "development of robust senior community inclusion strategies, material relationship growth and the execution of holistic objectives in support of our exceptional schools, and adoption of innovative solutions to bolster our small business and commerce environment; (these) are all areas that I would like to see us pursue."

Burks expressed confidence in the two new council members and the vice mayor.

"These three individuals bring extraordinary skill and dedication to the city council," said Burks. "Along with a community eager to continue the Lafayette tradition of public engagement around every corner, I believe strongly that we are well positioned to have a positive and successful year ahead."
