Utility boxes get spruced up as part of Artify Orinda

By Sora O'Doherty

The utility boxes in downtown Orinda are getting "artified," as professional artists work their wonders with paint. This utility box in front of Rite Aid was painted by Tim Hancock. Five more utility boxes and three big belly trash and recycling cans are scheduled to be painted this summer, adding to the six paintings on the Theater side. The Artify Orinda project was started by Maggie Boscoe from the Lamorinda Arts Council. Look for these paintings as you walk or drive around Orinda.
